Jet Source adds charter service out of Salt Lake City

Southern California aviation center adds three new aircraft to fleet.

CARLSBAD, Calif.; July 7, 2009 ... Jet Source, a leading business aviation center based out of Carlsbad, California has added three aircraft based out of Salt Lake City International Airport (SLC) to its charter fleet. The aircraft will be dedicated to serving charter customers flying to regional destinations, intercontinental and international locations as well.

“Jet Source is known for serving Southern California’s elite traveler with unparalleled service, privacy, security and safety,” said Megan Cunningham, Jet Source’s vice president of charter services. “Business and leisure customers based out of Salt Lake can expect an exceptional level of service from Jet Source for all of their international and domestic travel needs.”

The three aircraft, which will be based out of SLC, include a Gulfstream G550, a Falcon 50EX and a Pilatus. The Gulfstream G550 is one of the largest planes in the Jet Source fleet. It seats 14 and has international capabilities reaching destinations up to 7,700 miles. The Falcon 50EX seats nine and can fly coast to coast with a range up to 3,840 miles and the third aircraft available for charter out of Salt Lake City is a Pilatus which seats eight and has a range of 1,920 miles.

Jet Source charters include a dedicated flight crew, including personal cabin attendant and in-flight gourmet dining provided by Jet Source’s concierge service.

Other aircraft on Jet Source’s 135 charter certificate include a Challenger 604, Legacy 600, Gulfstream 400, Falcon 50, Hawker 800A, Citation VII, Westwind II, Citation CJ3, and Citation I.
